- 1) I played the role of Tordrak, a dwarf cleric, which made combat difficult due to the fact that my character is built to be a healer. My favorite moment from last week was when the people in my group began to enjoy the game and actually try to problem solve creatively.
- 2) I will try to approach this adventure by continuing to foster engagement with the game. The game seems to require engagement from players for it to be fun for anyone and it seems to require lots of social interaction and cooperation.
